ADVICE TO CLERGY REGARDING MARRIAGE IN CHURCH AFTER DIVORCE

All four of these documents should be considered essential reading.

Non-UK/EEA/Swiss Nationals

Since 2 March 2015 it has been unlawful for a marriage to proceed by banns or common licence unless both bride and groom are “relevant nationals” (a UK national, Swiss national, or a national of a country in the European Economic Area). Depending on precise circumstances, the marriage may also be void at law. A member of the clergy who knowingly and wilfully solemnises such a marriage may be committing a criminal offence; the maximum penalty for such offences under the Marriage Act is a term of imprisonment of fourteen years.

It is still, technically, possible for non relevant nationals to be married by Archbishop’s Special Licence. The Faculty Office <http://www.facultyoffice.org.uk> can advise in detail on this.

However, for the vast majority of such couples, the appropriate form of marriage preliminary will be a Superintendent Registrar’s Certificate, obtained from a (civil) Designated Registry Office. Clergy should therefore direct couples to their nearest Designated Registry Office. Within the Diocese, these are located in Hatfield and Luton (though for some couples, offices outside the Diocese, e.g. Barnet/ Northampton may be closer).

Couples should be directed to the relevant Government guidance here: <https://www.gov.uk/marriages-civil-partnerships>. Once issued, a Superintendent Registrar’s Certificate is an alternative to a banns certificate or Common Licence, so banns of marriage do not need to be called.

Common Licences

Since March 2015, the number of Common Licences applied for and issued has significantly decreased. The main reasons for seeking a Bishop’s Common Licence rather than publishing banns are as follows:

1. One or both of the parties are not resident in England & Wales, so cannot have their banns called in their home parish;
2. Banns cannot be called in one or more of the required churches on three Sundays before the wedding for whatever reason;

3. An error is discovered in the calling of banns at a late stage; or
4. A clergyperson, in their discretion, advises a couple to seek a Common Licence (perhaps due to uncertainty over paperwork provided).

If any of the above apply, please contact your local Surrogate or the Diocesan Registry. In relation to category 4 above, please contact the Registry for advice before sending a couple to the Surrogate.

Banns

Following the recent change in the law, Clergy should not treat Swiss and EEA nationals any differently from British nationals in the calling of Banns.

Clergy are reminded that a marriage must be solemnized within three months of the final occasion on which the banns were called.

Any questions as to the interpretation of the “qualifying connections” provisions should be checked with the Diocesan Registry before arrangements are made for the calling of banns.

Specified Evidence

Further to the recent amendments to Section 8 of the Marriage Act, which came into force in March 2015, no member of the clergy should publish banns without having seen evidence, in a form specified by the Secretary of State, that both bride and groom are relevant nationals.

Where the bride and groom can provide a valid, in-date passport, the requirements are straightforward. If this is not the case the position is, sadly, more complex. We have prepared a ‘one side of paper’ summary of the requirements, together with a checklist which will (we hope) assist clergy in confirming that the required paperwork has been provided. We have endeavoured to set out these new requirements as simply as possible; unfortunately the regulations are rather complex!

Banns often need to be read in more than one parish. Strictly speaking, each minister may refuse to call banns if they have not seen the original documentation provided as specified evidence. However, to save duplication of effort, clergy might consider it appropriate for the minister conducting the service to see the original documentation, take photocopies, and then sends copies (together with the signed checklist) to any clergy calling the couple’s banns elsewhere.

Such photocopies should be retained for a reasonable period after the wedding, and then be destroyed. We would suggest that a retention period of three years following the wedding would be appropriate (under the Marriage Act, any criminal prosecutions must be commenced within 3 years of the date of the wedding).

Where a party cannot provide the necessary specified evidence, they may still be able to marry in Church, but they will need to obtain a Superintendent Registrar’s Certificate (instead of a banns certificate or Common Licence). Please refer such couples to the local Register Office in the first instance.
