Christmas Countdown

Christmas Countdown: not a quiz show for the verbally and mathematically curious, but a 1 minute video advert for Christmas in church.

It is now live on the diocesan website and social media and intended to support parishes’ efforts to reach new people this Christmas.

The video points viewers towards the AChurchNearYou.com website which allows users to find a church or even a Christmas service near to them.

In St Albans Diocese, more than four times as many people come to church at Christmas compared to an average Sunday. Across the diocese, including school, and civic services and Advent, this rises to a quarter of a million people. That means more than 1 in 8 people in the population hearing the Christmas story afresh or renewing their link with it.

Helping people to engage with the Christmas story when they are preparing for Christmas or when they come to church will help them to engage with the Christian faith.

The short ad shows a family preparing for Christmas, Christmas activities and services in church.

At the same time, the Mission Department has produced a helpful checklist to help invite, welcome and relate to visitors this Christmas.

Finding ways of helping Christmas visitors to return sooner than a year is essential to helping them to make the journey from visitor to pilgrim, should they so wish.

A Church Near You updated

Church-finding website AChurchNearYou.com has been redesigned and re-engineered from the bottom up.

With Christmas just around the corner, editors will want to browse the new site and ensure all their church’s details are correct, and also spend some time adding their Advent and Christmas services, or updating them with some of the new tags on the site if they haven’t already done so.

FAQs for editors are at: www.achurchnearyou.com/faq/

The major change that editors will notice is that authentication of their identity no longer needs to be done via the diocesan office in most situations, but is done directly online.

★★★★★ Merry Christmas to all our readers! ★★★★★
Some years ago I went to see Shakespeare’s Julius Caesar in a small theatre called The Other Place in Stratford-upon-Avon. It was a venue which specialised in experimental theatre and we had been warned that the audience might get caught up in the drama. I hadn’t quite realised that we would be standing for much of the performance and then having to move around as the play unfolded, interacting with the actors. It was so real that by the end of the play I was left feeling that I hadn’t just watched a play but that I’d participated in violence and was even partially complicit in a murder!

It is easy to approach the events of Christmas dispassionately and at arm’s-length. But if we are to enter into the true meaning of the first Christmas, we too need to become part of the action.

For over 400 years Christians in Mexico have re-enacted the Christmas story each December. They call it Los Posadas. It began with the Spanish Conceptionist monks visiting each other’s monasteries, bearing statues of Joseph and Mary. They would knock on the great oak doors of the monastery, asking if there was anyone to welcome them and make room to receive Christ. Soon it was taken up by the local population and before long the tradition of making human sacrifices in honour of the God Huitzilopochtli was transformed from a time of bloodshed into a time of giving and celebration, as they received Christ.

This tradition persists today – and some of our churches and schools here in the diocese have picked it up. In the days leading up to Christmas, families set out, carrying statues of Joseph and Mary, and visit the homes of their neighbours. They knock on the door and ask “Is there anyone within who will make space for Christ? Will anyone welcome him?” Symbolically the doors are thrown open and space is made so that they may receive the Christ. The next day the statues are taken onto another home until they finally arrive at the church on Christmas Day.

And here is the great significance of the events of Christmas – Jesus Christ comes to us, our homes, our families. He is not contained in the churches or in the great monasteries of Mexico, but wants to make his home among us in the ordinary places of life, among us, the ordinary people. One of the most familiar carols is a prayer that each one of us will become part of the Christmas story.

Let us make this our prayer this year:

O holy Child of Bethlehem
Descend to us, we pray
Cast out our sin and enter in
Be born to us today.
We hear the Christmas angels
The great glad tidings tell
O come to us, abide with us
Our Lord Emmanuel.

‘Messy Woodwork’ connects with Christmas

Clifton and Southill’s five-day mission in November with Bishop Richard is still bearing fruit, including in a life-size wooden nativity which has gone up outside All Saints Clifton.

The carpentry was the result of ‘Messy Woodwork’ which is a new outreach that the church has run a couple of times for younger teenagers and which is also very popular with their dads. It’s like “Who let the dads out!” says Rector, Revd Caren Topley. The figures of Mary and Jospeh are graced by masks made by Henlow Middle School and the tableau will help welcome visitors to celebrate Christmas at the church.

Messy Woodwork was just once of the highlights Bishop Richard saw during the mission in the benefice. Accompanied by Carrie, Cathy and Lindsay (one potential ordinand and two trainee Readers), and supported by a local team, Bishop Richard and the team were involved in a wide range of events from school assemblies, to an evening of testimony and questions/answers at Southill Park, and conversations with people in three of the local pubs. It was a time of encouragement, renewal and reaching out.

The mission was part of Clifton’s MAP and fitted with the church’s work to get everyone in the parish involved in outreach to the community. As well as Messy Church and Toddler Church, the church is open all week and Craft and Chat sessions take place, drawing 30 to 50 as well as the local care scheme, Clifton Care, hosting a drop-in cafe, well attended by older men, many bereaved. One mum from Messy Church commented: “the church is part of the community now.”

The combined effect of all these new activities is that 58 people joined the church in 2015 and 110 last year, roughly equal numbers of adults and children. A bumper crop of Crib service attenders has also promoted thought about inviting them back, so the church is launchng a new all-age service in January and holding a Christingle at Candelmas.

A Lent Study to learn lessons from the past

‘Moral Dilemmas in Challenging Times’ is a new study guide that encourages groups to delve into divisive issues such as nationalism, populism and extremism from a faith perspective, published by the Council of Christians and Jews (CCJ) and the educational foundation, Cumberland Lodge, in time for Lent 2018.

The forward is written by the Revd Bonnie Evans Hills, from this diocese, with guest contributors including Dr Rowan Williams, Rabbi Jonathan Wittenberg (Senior Rabbi of Masorti Judaism) and the novelist and speaker, Salley Vickers.

The brief guide accompanies the new edition of Amy Buller’s groundbreaking 1943 book, Darkness over Germany: A Warning from History, which explores how young people were drawn into National Socialism in the 1930s and sheds light on many of the most pressing social issues we face in current times. It was this book that inspired King George VI and Queen Elizabeth to establish the educational foundation at Cumberland Lodge in Windsor Great Park in 1947, to try to avoid a repeat of the events of 1930s Germany.

Moral Dilemmas in Challenging Times draws on key conversations with Nazi Party members and public figures relayed in Darkness over Germany. It offers six short reflections, each with questions for discussion, and is designed to be suitable for Lent courses in churches and other faith settings.

Rowan Williams has described Buller’s work as, ‘a really remarkable book by a very remarkable woman, who was driven by her Christian faith’. He spoke of the spiritual vacuum that emerged in the inter-war period in Germany, the risks of a generation growing up without hope, seeking a magical ‘problem-solver’ to meet their needs, and the resonances of 1930s Germany for many of the issues we face today.

The new guide can be downloaded free of charge from January 2018 from the CCJ website: www.ccj.org.uk

Pam Rhodes’ Christmas Companion

Pam Rhodes, BBC Songs of Praise presenter well known to people in St Albans Diocese, has a new paperback out in time for Christmas.

Her ‘Tidings of Comfort and Joy - A Christmas Fear of Faith & Fun’ is a collection of poems, stories, hymns, carols and Bible readings with a Christmas theme. As well as the usual old favourites - from Hark the Herald Angels Sing to the stories of the shepherds and the wise men visiting the baby Jesus - there are plenty of lighter moments, with excerpts from Gervase Phinn’s memoirs and funny poems by modern writers. Alongside the items themselves Pam shares some of her own Christmas reminiscences and explores the resonance of the Christmas story for all our lives in her trademark inviting and heartwarming style.

Hodder & Stoughton 9781473630048 paperback £9.99
Christian Aid’s Christmas Appeal is for children and families in South Sudan and Burkina Faso. The appeal benefits from £2.7m matched funding from HM Government. At the same time, Christian Aid has quantified the significant amount of food wasted or thrown away at Christmas time in the UK and has produced a humorous song about it called, ‘Oh What a Waste’. Sung to the tune of ‘Twelve Days of Christmas’, its lyrics are:

Every year at Christmas the UK throws away:
12 million carrots
11 million roasties
10 million parsnips
9 million boats of gravy
8 million balls of stuffing
70 million mince pies
6 million jars of cranberry
Ooooooo… what… a… waste
4 million puddings
So many sprouts
2 million turkeys
And they’re all at the bottom of the bin.

The suggestion is that £10 from our Christmas shop donated to help fight famine and hunger will reduce the amount of waste, because it will reduce the amount of overbuying we do.

In stark contrast, earlier this year, famine was declared in parts of South Sudan: the first time it was declared anywhere in six years. More than three years of conflict had displaced nearly 4 million people, disrupting harvests and leading to devastating food shortages.

Although the famine was averted, the crisis in South Sudan has reached unprecedented levels – nearly 6 million people are facing severe food insecurity. If left untreated, acute malnutrition – the most extreme form of food crisis – can lead to death.

Aluel, pictured above, used to run a small business selling tea and bread at her local market, which provided enough money to feed her family. As the situation in South Sudan deteriorated, inflation rose to 800%, meaning her earnings could no longer buy enough food to put on the table.

Christian Aid partner organisation SPEDP (Support for Peace and Education and Development Programme) is providing cash vouchers to people, like Aluel, struggling with acute malnutrition in South Sudan, so they can buy essential food in local markets to help their families recover.

Bishop voices concerns for poorest facing household debt

During November, Bishop Alan drew attention in the House of Lords on two occasions to the crisis of household debt facing many in the UK. This was ahead of more recent reports bearing out his concerns.

Among the problems associated with debt are risks to the economy. The Bank of England Financial Policy Committee says rising debt levels pose: “a risk to (Banks’) ability to withstand severe economic downturns”, and, “they have been underestimating the losses they could incur”. Bishop Alan said: “The banking industry has an obligation to heed these warnings and act responsibly. I hope that deep and productive partnerships can be formed between financial institutions and the FCA to make changes that benefit consumers and encourage them to save, and that the Government will step in to regulate if needed.”

Other risks are to individuals. To their lifelong prosperity and their health, dignity and wellbeing. Bishop Alan is particularly concerned about the effects of debt on children and the poorest members of society. He cites rising consumer debt, gambling and benefits freezes as among most significant causes and the ones about which most can be done.

He said three principles should govern how the benefits system works, fairness, generosity, and sustainability. Speaking after the debates, Bishop Alan said: “The worst effects of debt on individuals are on the very young and other vulnerable people in our society. Child poverty is rising and there is an increasing number of people accessing help for problem gambling who are in debt. Rising levels of child poverty are unacceptable.”

Dates have just been announced for Thy Kingdom Come 2018. Last year, Thy Kingdom Come celebrated and dedicated the days between Ascension Day and Pentecost in prayer for new disciples.

In 2018, the dates for your diary are 10th to 20th May.

One of the new resources for 2018 has already been made available. It is the ‘Evangelism for the Local Church booklet’, which you can download now. Also, coming soon is a national Lent Course to encourage and enable every Christian in their witness.

Recently, Thy Kingdom Come won the Jerusalem Award for the best short film ‘Light’ by Luke Bradford and also came second in the Best Digital Campaign category at the Premier Digital Awards! ‘Light’ is about what happens when the light of Christ shines in the darkness, narrated by Archbishop Justin. STOP PRESS - Lost Abbot found at St Albans Cathedral

Archaeologists from the Canterbury Archaeological Trust (CAT) working at St Albans Cathedral have discovered the grave of John of Wheathampstead, a former Abbot of national and international renown, who died in 1465, and whose burial site has remained a mystery to this day. In an extremely rare development, the team also discovered three papal seals, known as ‘papal bulls’, inside the grave, issued by Pope Martin V (1417-1431).

It is the presence of these bulls that confirm that this is the grave of Abbot Wheathampstead. Professor James Clark (University of Exeter), who is an expert on the Abbey’s medieval history, has found that early in his career Abbot John secured three special privileges at an audience with Pope Martin and that he was remembered ever after for his great success when visiting the papal court.

The dig is taking place in advance of the construction of a new Welcome Centre, supported by the Heritage Lottery Fund, and part of the Alban, Britain’s First Saint project. Archaeological work continues at St Albans Cathedral until early 2018 and the new Welcome Centre opens in June 2019.
